ABDOMINAL AND THORACIC AORTIC ANEURYSMS

An aneurysm is a severe and life-threatening condition and often does not show symptoms. It is the abnormal bulging or enlargement in the wall of an artery. It happens when part of a blood vessel wall weakens, making it widen. Most aneurysms occur in the aorta, the main artery that carries blood away from the heart to the abdomen, pelvis and legs. An aortic aneurysm is usually discovered during health screenings or tests, so stay on top of your health by regularly visiting a doctor for assessment.

CAROTID ARTERY STENOSIS

As plaque builds up in the carotid arteries over time, it can lead to narrowing and eventually restrict blood flow to the brain. Carotid artery stenosis is a common cause of stroke. However, it is possible to have the condition and no symptoms at all.

CARDIO-ONCOLOGY

Medical advancements have significantly improved cancer treatment and care, allowing patients to live longer and fuller lives. As survival from many cancer types improve, there is a growing awareness of the increased rates of heart disease among cancer survivors. Cardio-oncology is a branch of cardiology that seeks to identify cancer patients at risk for heart disease in order to protect the heart at every stage of a cancer patient's journey to better health.

DEEP VEIN THROMBOSIS, VENOUS THROMBOEMBOLISM & PULMONARY EMBOLUS

Deep Vein Thrombosis (DVT) refers to blood clots that form in the deep veins of your body, most commonly in your legs. The deep veins are the ones that you cannot see on your body surface. When a blood clot (termed thrombus within the body) forms suddenly in a deep vein and stops the flow of blood towards the heart, the vein becomes bigger and can no longer effectively drain the affected leg of venous blood. If large enough, the obstruction and lack of proper venous emptying of the leg thus causes symptoms such as pain, tenderness, and swelling.

DIABETIC NEUROPATHY

Diabetic neuropathy is a type of nerve damage that occurs in a large number of diabetic patients. The legs and feet are most commonly affected by this condition. The digestive system, blood vessels, urinary tract, and other systems of the body can also be affected.

INTERVENTIONAL CARDIOLOGY

Our interventional cardiologists can use PCI on an emergency basis – when a patient is experiencing a heart attack to open a blocked artery and restore blood flow to the heart – or during a scheduled procedure to open blocked arteries before they cause a heart attack.

PERIPHERAL ARTERY DISEASE

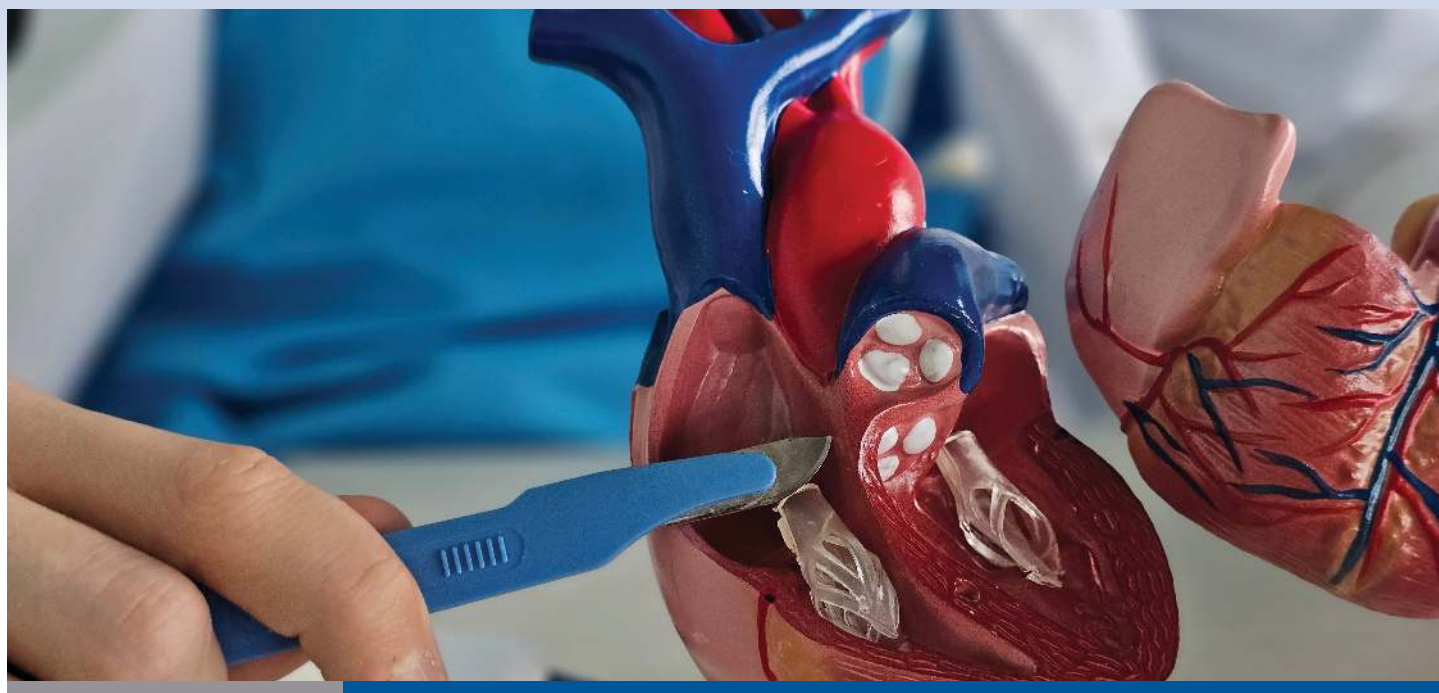

Peripheral artery disease (PAD), also called peripheral arterial disease, is a common form of peripheral vascular disease that occurs when plaque builds up in the peripheral arteries, preventing blood flow to other parts of the body. PAD most commonly affects the lower extremities, like the legs and feet. It can also be used interchangeably with peripheral vascular disease.

PERIPHERAL VASCULAR DISEASE

Peripheral vascular disease (PVD) is an umbrella term that includes PAD, lymphatic disease and peripheral venous disease. It is often used interchangeably with PAD. The American Heart Association recommends the term PAD to describe a disease affecting the blood vessels outside the heart.

VENOUS INSUFFICIENCY

Venous insufficiency occurs when the veins in the legs have difficulty sending blood back to the heart, which causes poor blood circulation and usually worrisome symptoms like leg ulcers. It is a fairly common chronic condition affecting 40% of people in the United States, especially women who have had multiple pregnancies.

CARDIOTHORACIC SURGERY

At Baptist Heart & Vascular, our cardiothoracic surgeons focus on delivering compassionate, advanced heart and lung care to the San Antonio area by providing access to innovative therapies and techniques.

We are committed to working closely with referring physicians to ensure that their patients receive outstanding pre- and post-operative care.

HEART RHYTHM & ELECTROPHYSIOLOGY

The heart is a beautifully designed pump that relies on its own electrical system to beat and circulate blood throughout the body. Sometimes there is a problem with the heart's electrical system – or electrophysiology – resulting in a heart rhythm disorder whereby the heart beats too fast, too slow, or irregularly, which can lead to a number of complications, including stroke and even sudden death.

The electrophysiologists at the Baptist Heart & Vascular are physicians who have specialized training in diagnosing and treating heart rhythm disorders and irregular heartbeats (arrhythmias). They use a number of advanced technologies and techniques for diagnosis and management.

Heart Rhythm Management

- ▶ Evaluation and treatment of atrial fibrillation, ventricular tachycardia and other arrhythmias
- ▶ Evaluation and treatment of syncope
- ▶ Management of antiarrhythmic medications
- ▶ Electrophysiology studies
- ▶ Ablations
- ▶ Holter monitors, event monitors, and implantable loop recorders
- ▶ Implantation and management of pacemakers
- ▶ Implantation and management of implanted cardioverter defibrillators (ICDs)
- ▶ Cardiac re-synchronization therapy and biventricular devices
- ▶ Intracardiac echocardiograms

ABLATION

Radiofrequency ablation is where one or more flexible, thin tubes (catheters) are guided via x-ray through the blood vessels to abnormal heart muscle tissue. Once there, a burst of radiofrequency energy destroys very small areas of the tissue, which give rise to abnormal electrical signals causing rhythm disturbances.

HOLTER AND EVENT MONITORING

The 24-hour Holter monitor is an electrocardiographic recording device that utilizes electrodes, which the patient wears for a 24-hour period, including during sleep and exercise. The Holter monitor captures the patient's entire heart rhythm over a 24-hour period so that it can be analyzed.

PACEMAKER IMPLANTATION

Pacemakers are particularly helpful in patients who suffer from heart rhythms which are abnormally slow. Typically, the pacemaker is placed under the skin of the front wall of the heart below the collarbone. Monitoring of the pacemaker is usually done remotely at home with periodic visits to the cardiologist's office.

ICD IMPLANTATION

Implanted cardioverter defibrillators (ICDs) are 99 percent effective in stopping life-threatening arrhythmias and are the most successful therapy to treat ventricular fibrillation, a major cause of sudden cardiac death.

HEART FAILURE

Baptist Heart & Vascular's Heart Failure clinic provides care for patients at any stage of heart failure. From prescribing the best medications and recommending therapies for heart failure symptoms to educating patients and their loved ones, we incorporate the patient's values and preferences for shared decision-making regarding treatment options. We also collaborate with the patient's other healthcare providers to ensure clear communication and coordination of care.
